Local freelance writer, lecturer

He'll search for lost continent of Atlantis

PLEASANTON - A local man is embarking on a journey to find the lost continent of Atlantis.

With his carefully groomed white hair and doubleknit suit, Nicias P. Reckas doesn't look like the adventuresome type. A semi-retired fabric salesman, he and his wife live quietly in their four-bedroom home on Touriga Drive.

But Reckas is a freelance writer, photographer and lecturer in his spare time. He has developed a slide lecture on the spiritual significance of Death Valley, and the talk has been well received by many fraternal and church groups.

His new project is much more ambitious: Proving that the Aegean island of Santorini was once the seat of the advanced civilization, now lost, that we call "Atlantis."

The theory is not Reckas' own, although the Pleasanton resident has done original research to prove it. Scientists and archaeologists have found evidnce that a volcanic explosion, four times more powerful than the famous 1883 disaster of Krakatoa in the Netherland East Indies, with one blow wiped out the sophisticated Minoan civilization on Crete and nearby islands.

The explosion seems to have taken place about 1500 B.C. on Santorini.

"At Krakatoa," says Reckas, "there's an enormous crater where the volcanic mountain was before it blew up. There's also a crater at Santorini — four times the size. Santorini is a crescent-shaped island now, with a harbor so deep boats can't anchor in it. That's the crater."

Archaeologists are digging through 200 feet of pumice to uncover the ruins at Santorini. Krakatoa was covered with about 50 feet of the volcanic ash, so the mathematical relationship seems to hold up.

There was a 100-foot tidal wave generated by the shattering Krakatoa explosion. The theory Reckas is advancing is that a 400-foot wave swept through the Aegean, wiping out in one huge disaster the ancient Minoan civilization, which was immortalized in later legends of an underwater continent.

Reckas was born in Greece. When he was seven, his family immigrated to Fresno . One of his current projects is completing a book called "Ouzo" (named after the popular Greek liquor), a humorous chronicle of the Greek population of Fresno during the Thirties.

During World War II, he worked with the U.S. military intelligence in the Azores, plying the local children with candy bars to get information.

His native village is near Sparta, Greece. Since he still speaks (as well as flawless English and a little Portuguese), he anticipates no problems in communicating with native archaeologists and scientists in his combination business - pleasure trip to Santorini.

He embarks Sept. 3, planning a stay of as long as three months.

No stranger to archaeology, Reckas dug in Palestine in 1934-35 with a group from the Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, where he was a student.

While on that expedition, he came across a scientific article written by a young Greek archeologist named Marinatos which became the basis for his own theory. He also found a passage in the writings of the ancient philosopher, Plato: "...there occurred violent earthquakes and floods, and in a single day and night of misfortune all men in a body sank into the earth and the island of Atlantis disappeared in the depths of the sea."

Bearing two cameras, special lenses and a lot of paper for taking notes, Reckas plans to travel by donkey-back to the archaeological dig on Santorini. He'll also look at the fabulous palace at Knossos, Crete, which is visible proof of how advanced and powerful the Minoan empire was before it came to an abrupt end some 3,500 years ago.

"It was a civilization unsurpassed in ship building for long and rough voyages; trade-marked pottery for advertising and containing olive oil, wines, wheat and other cereals with an unusual bookkeeping system controlling shipments; docks and canals; fashionably designed women's clothing; paintings; circuses and acrobatic leaps on bulls considered dangerous today; landscape artistry far surpassing the gardens at Versailles; irrigation systems; excellent roadways connecting the cities of the kingdom; running water within the apartments with baths and flush toilets."

The theories of others have placed Atlantis in the Mediterranean, off the coast of Mexico, and in various other spots where divers think they've found clues. But Reckas has no doubt it's in the Aegean.

Catholic families push for Parochial school

A group of families from St. Augustine's Catholic Church in Pleasanton feel there is a "great need of a parochial school" and have sincere hopes of having that school by September of 1976.

These interested families feel the public school philosophy on education is directly opposite to what they would like to have for their children. They prefer a Catholic School using the fundamental philosophy of teaching combined with the daily religious instructions.

Following a letter, accompanied with a petition signed by 126 interested families, which was sent to the Most Reverend Floyd Begin, Bishop of Oakland, Father Edmond Cloutier, pastor of St. Augustine's Church informed all Masses on Sunday of the interest shown in forming a parochial school and told parishoners what he has done to investigate the feasibility of such an undertaking.

Father Cloutier has appointed a committee consisting of approximately 15 adults with Tony Sobi heading up the facility committee, Jim Kortan in charge of personnel and Joe Morgan working on finances.

These committees will conduct a study and make a fact finding report to determine the advantages of a parochial school at St. Augustine's. A report showing the "school on paper" will have to be completed by December of this year.

The combined committee will compose a questionnaire to mail to all parishoners to get their honest feelings and opinions on having a parochial school. According to a spokesman serving on the committee, this questionnaire should be ready by Aug. 14.

The committee also will study the transportation needs and availability of teachers, lay or religious.

Father Cloutier is asking all parishioners to take the time to give serious and considerate thought in answering the questions in order to have a full picture of the cost, manpower, requirements and facilities necessary for a well-rounded parochial school.

He also told parishoners they should consider how the school is financed — through tuition, fund raising or other means of support. Father Cloutier advised his parishioners to keep in mind that today a parachial school is not worth it unless it is financially, independent from the parish.

Before giving his presentation on Sunday, Father Cloutier contacted several parochial schools in various sections of the diocese, to obtain facts pertaining to such an undertaking. He spoke with the pastors, and stated he was "very upset after hearing some of the facts given to me ." He also said,"I want to present some of the bad points of a parochial school, which I want you to remember. We are looking for a school, may have one and want one, but to let things happen as they fall, is not the right attitude." "I think we have to have the comprehensive picture," he added .

The financial picture of the parochial schools in other parishes, although they were operating independently, was not a good one according to Father Cloutier. One school charged $500 per year per family and even with this, another $20,000 to $25,000 was going to have to be raised outside of the tuition fee in order to keep the school operating.

Another parish quoted a figure of $1210 per child per year and the parents had to sign a contract to pay $41 per month. If this amount was not collected by the 20th of the month, the child was expelled.

Another Pastor informed Father Cloutier that he "inheritited" his school when he came to the Parish and if he had his way he would not have it and would concentrate on a strong Confraternity of Christian Doctrine program.

That same pastor, according to Father Cloutier also said he felt a parochial school divided a parish, since there would be some parents who would not be able to afford the tuition charged.

Father Cloutier went on to state further facts from various pastors and summed it by saying if the parishioners indicate on the questionnaire they are interested in having a parochial school, a meeting would be held and these pastors would be asked to answer any questions and to give the good and bad points of such a facility.

St. Augustine's is renting rooms to the Christian Valley Church which Father Cloutier said, teaches the basic facts of christianity and those parents wishing to send their children to a parochial school they could enroll their children with this group.

Regardless of what decision the parishioners make, Father Cloutier has made it clear that the CCD (religious) classes will get top priority in consideration of facilities.

In the CCD program, he stated that 1800 were enrolled whereas in a parochial school the enrollment would be limited to 500 students, still leaving many children not receiving religious training of any kind.

Following Father Cloutier's presentation on Sunday, several families wrote to the Bishop indicating their own personal feelings in regard to what they considered his "negative report" to the members of the church. They felt that this might affect some of the parishioners giving their true feelings on the questionnaire when they are filling it out or may ignore the questionnaire entirely.

These families also felt that the problem of finances is not as bad as Father Cloutier indicated. They want the school "to be self supporting as many in the diocese are," and felt it would support itself.

The committee will not be drawing any conclusions about a parochial school until the return of the questionnaire. Grades one through eight are being considered, but it will depend on "where the need lies." they might also consider starting with a few grades and then adding an additional grade each year.

When the interested parents were presenting the petition for signatures, they did run into some opposition, but felt, "if these people are not interested, they don't have to support the school." Again it was stated that the financial support would come from "interested" parents only.

As far as the school having other "extra" activities and facilities available, it was felt these can be obtained since everyone is a taxpayer and those facilities are available to them.

If the people indicate overwhelming oposition to the idea, the interested parents said they would forget about a parochial school at St. Augustine's. It was stated that perhaps St. Michael's in Livermore could be expanded in some way. "With increase growth in the Valley, the increase of Catholics in the parish as well as Valley wide, we feel a definite need for a parochial school is here," stated one individual.

The parents indicated their main concern with the public schools is that they do not carry out the discipline which the child is taught at home. "I feel a child should be considered as a whole individual with a balance of education and not concentrate just on the three r's," commented one parent.

The committee strongly wishes and hopes everyone in the church, regardless of how they feel about a parochial school, will take time to fill out the questionnaire and return it. The questionnaire will be tallied electronically.

Oct. 1 deadline for decision on future of BART bus service in the valley

BART considers pulling back

Buses on the way out?

OAKLAND - BART's brief presence in the valley may soon disappear.

Expressing "serious concern" about the cost of the commuter bus service, newly appointed BART General Manager Frank Herringer overrode a recommendation to extend it until Dec. 31 Tuesday and, instead, extended the service only until the end of September.

That proposal was unanimously approved by the three-member BART Board Engineering Committee.

By Oct. 1, Herringer said he would recommend whether the experimental bus service should be continued as is, reduced or cut completely.

Through an agreement with AC Transit, BART operates four bus routes which connect outlying areas in Alameda and Contra Costa counties to the BART rail system.

Although patronage and revenues on the four routes have increased since the buses started running Dec. 2, operating expenses for the system were more than $700,000 in the first five months.

(By comparison, less than $100,000 in revenue was taken in on the four routes during the same December through April period.)

Average daily patronage on the four routes has increased nearly 45 percent since December, from 1,733 in December to 2,506 at the end of May.

Daily patronage on the valley line (which connects Pleasanton, Livermore, Dublin and San Ramon to Hayward-Bay Fair) has increased 47 percent, from 601 in December to 884 in May.

Nearly twice as many people rode the Pittsburg-Antioch-Martinez to Concord line in May as did in December (1,033 compared to 532) while the Pinole to El Cerrito route also showed an increase (from 127 to 157).

The Danville-San Ramon to Walnut Creek line, however, showed a decrease in average daily patronage, from 472 in December to 431 in May.

Since the end of May, the bus system has been operating on an informal basis, according to a BART spokesman, because the BART board refused to extend the experiment another six months for budgetary reasons.

Following Tuesday's action by the Engineering Committee, the system's operation was formalized — but only for a three-month period which will expire at the end of September.

Herringer's recommendation on the future of the bus service will be part of an overall budget review. The spokesman said Herringer wanted to extend the service only until October, rather than to the end of the year "to preserve his flexibility."

The bus experiment was begun last December to provide at least some service to residents in the BART taxing area, who have been supporting the system through taxes since 1962, but have not had direct transportation to the fixed rail system.

If the bus system is curtailed, the money saved could go to finance extended BART hours, although that decision will most certainly not be made until Herringer makes his recommendations in early October.

Negotiations begin in MESD

The long-stalled negotiations between the teachers and the Murray Elementary School District have begun again, but even so the two groups are still negotiating only on how to negotiate.

The present standoff resulted from the teachers' call for a fact-finding committee to discuss certain specific issues.

Fact-finding procedures are outlined by state law, but only if no district policy exists. The Certificated Employes' Council (CEC), which represents 226 teachers, called for fact-finding(without being aware of MESD Administrative Regulation 4135.

AR 4135 set up a three-man committee with(the teachers and district each appointing one member. The two then would choose a third member. If the two could not agree, the(third member would be choen a local college's dean of education.

The teachers claim that a local dean would be biased in his selection for the district, and also want mediation if the fact-finding committee fails to come to mutually agreeable conclusions.

Indoor tennis a certainty at Fairgrounds building

The Young California Building at the County Fairgrounds will be used for tennis for an interim period of six months, subject to cost, a Fair Board subcommittee has decided.

Preliminary estimates are that it will cost at least $3,000 or $4,000 to put four courts in. The Fair Association will operate the tennis courts initially. Buildings and grounds committee members also discussed hiring a tennis pro to do the scheluling and collect fees.

Left undecided were imount of fees and hours of operation. However, the rental fee for the Exhibition Hill has been $240 a day anl Lee Hall, Fairgrounds Manager, ventured that a suitable rental price for thm Young California Building might be about $500. The building has 34,000 sq. nt. of usable floor space, plus 4,000 more in the kitchen and restroom areas.

(Four major events are being considered for the building, including the Oktoberfest, Irishfest, Mineral and Gem Show and a new car preview show. The latter would be a Fair Association event in cooperation with valley car dealers.

Committee members were spli over the relative values of a tennis function in the building versus preference to individual shows and exhibits. Hall noted that the(Oktoberfest had produced $4,700 in rental fees for two weeks. But committee member Frank Ivaldi questioned whether the courts would get much use during good weather months.

The auto show would be held sometime in October over a three-day weekend period.

The Mineral and Gem Show is definitly set for the grounds, though the number of buildings to be occupied is not certain. It will be national in scope.

Hall also assurred board members that he will try to schedule two-day minimum events into the YCB.

In other business before the panel Tuesday, it was decided to proceed with carnival relocation plans, including undergrounding of utilities, moving of Gate C, fencing and installing of two mobile toilet facilities. Hall said there is $315,000 left in the budget for the relocation budget.

Hall was also directed to write a letter to the Department of Public Works asking them to proceed with plans for the livestock pavilion. The Fair Association wants to build a new judging arena between buildings 2 and 3 and demolish buildings 1, 4 and 5.

Phase II work on Palm Way will continue with undergrounding of utilities past the cafeteria. It is also proposed to widen the entry way and transport in four palm trees from the Livermore Sanitarium grounds.

The drop-off area at the main entry way on Pleasanton Avenue will be further improved with two lanes for traffic and a sidewalk. This would complete the project. It was also decided to construct or improve portable ticket booths.

Committee members also discussed moving of the Mexican Village, a feature of the County Fair, to the small barbecue area.

Hall also suggested a 4-way clock tower for the Mexican Village area much like the one Hall says that is a landmark at the Los Angeles County Fair in Pomona. Cost for new planning of the area in question is pegged at $65,000.

Livermore council action

Motel tax hiked

LIVERMORE — Rather than double the hotel/motel bed tax from 5 to 10 percent, the city council has voted to raise the tax to 6 percent.

The action, which is estimated to generate an additional $8,000 for the municipal budget, was passed Monday night by a 4-1 vote.

Councilman Dale Turner opposed the increase, stating it was "entirely wrong" to take Livermore hotel and motel operators out of a competitive market for only $8,000.

Turner was referring to an argument put forth by the city's innkeepers that Pleasanton charges a 5 percent tax and Dublin none at all, thus potential patrons will stay in those areas.

The original 10 percent tax was recommended by City Manager Bill Parness and Finance Director George Nolan as a way to collect an additional $40,000 for the budget.

A formal letter of protest from the local motel and hotel operators followed and Marcel Chaparteguy, whose family owns the El Dorado Motel on First Street, appeared before the city council last week warning that such an increase would lead to less business for the city as a whole.

Apparently, the city council also viewed the proposed increase as too drastic and arrived at the figure of 6½ percent, the same rate as sales tax.

Innkeepers present at the council meeting Monday night spoke to the 6½ percent tax, saying even that figure was too high.

"It's definitely going to hurt the business," explained Duane Beck, sales manager of the Holiday Inn. He added that 6 percent "is a little bit more fair than 6½ percent" and was a figure the industry in Livermore might be able to somewhat withstand.

Addressing the council for the second week in a row was Chaparteguy, who told members Monday night he would rather see 6 rather than 6½ percent. Such a figure would keep Livermore in par with the Bay Area. "Why go above it," he asked.

After hearing the operators' remarks, Councilman John Staley was the first to indicate he would support a 6 percent tax.

In accordance with parliamentary procedure, Councilwoman Helen Tirsell withdrew her second from the 6½ percent motion and Councilman Don Miller re-made his motion for the increase, changing the figure to 6 percent. The motion then passed.

Before taking action on the increase, Miller's first indication was that he supported an increase to 6 percent; Tirsell, 7 percent, and Staley, 6½ percent. Turner was opposed to any increase from the start while Mayor Archer Futch remained silent on specific figures.

Citizens assist police to nab Fresno suspect

LIVERMORE — A suspicious neighbor and a helpful motorist aided local police in the arrest of a Fresno juvenile Monday for possession of a stolen car and jumping a no-bail warrant.

Gary Fisk, 5043 Charlotte Way, alerted police when he reported the theft of gas from his car Sunday night. The finale came Monday evening when Stan A. Carter, 5107 Norman Way, tackled the suspect youth as he fled police.

Fisk called police Monday and told them he saw the car he suspected in the Sunday theft, this time providing police with a complete description and license number. A routine check listed the car as stolen from Donald D. Fillpet of Fresno.

Patrolman Larry Morrison found the car, its engine still hot, in a nearby apartment parking lot. Neighbors told Morrison it was being driven by a 14-year-old who claimed he'd stolen it.

Three youths were found in the apartment pointed out by neighbors, although witnesses would not identify either of the two boys as drivers of the stolen car.

When the two were arrested one youth, who gave police a false name during questioning, bolted toward East Ave with Morrison and patrolman Don Neher in pursuit.

As Neher neared the youth on Lillian St., Carter pulled up offering help. Cutting off the boy's escape route, he jumped from his car and tackled the fleeing youth, holding him for police.

The boy was "very combative and verbally abusive," according to police, kicking at the doors and windows of Morrison's unscreened patrol car when the officer tried to transfer him to Neher's car.

Police allege the youth kicked at Morrison several times before being subdued, and received a cut lip in the fracas.

The other boy, a 15-year-old, told police he knew his friend was a runaway, but did not know the car was stolen. He was released to his mother.

The 14-year-old told police a friend got the car for him when he said he wanted to see his girlfriend.

The youth was transferred to Fresno authorities.

Navy vet hits court candidate

A mistrustful San Leandro citizen has denounced the man he claims is the only nominee for a vacancy on the San Leandro-Hayward Municipal Court.

Robert Simmerman, a retired Navy veteran, sent an open letter to Governor Jerry Brown and to the media outlining his objections to the appointment of Raymond Marsh to the municipal court.

Marsh, a lawyer with Newman, Marsh and Furtado in Castro Valley, is the only nominee for the vacancy, Simmerman claims, citing William Shannon Parrish, a member of the Board of Governors of the California State Bar Association, as his source.

Simmerman claims Marsh is a close friend of Judge Robert Fairwell of the San Leandro-Hayward Municipal Court and also of Edward Carroll, a former associate of Parrish.

He links these men with former Judge William Spruance, one of two judges in California history removed from the bench for misconduct, according to Simmerman.

Simmerman urges Brown to reconsider appointing Marsh to the vacant seat on the bench.

Marsh denied the implications in the letter and stated "I would not have sought the position if I were not qualified for it."

He has run for judicial posts twice and lost.

Dapper brush

Ed Kinney has tossed his red-hued moustache into the beard and moustache contest "ring" and, via Mayoral fiat, proclaimed a special "Yosemite Sam moustache division." Mayor Ed has no official competition in that division to date. The contest will culminate the week of Pleasanton Daze in October with a distinguished panel of judges (to be announced later) awarding prizes in the beard and moustache divisions.

VCSD classes need teachers

Lilly of the Valley

If you missed the "Vegetable Swap" this past Saturday, you missed an interesting, rewarding and educational opportunity, not to mention lots of good nutritious vegetables. The vegetable growers gathering was sponsored by the Pleasanton Junior Women's Club at Wayside Park along First Street in Pleasanton.

Although participation was light, as a matter of fact, very light, this shopper had a great time. Since I had no green vegetables to "swap" greenbacks were accepted.,

I'll have to testify that, "you can take the girl out of the farm, but you can't take the farm out of the girl," is one saying that is very true I'm finding out. Being an ex-farm girl here, anything connected with a farm atmosphere particularly fresh vegetables and fruit, this gal really gets turned on!.

The "Bloomer Girls" as they call themselves, grow their vegetables in Livermore and had some very interesting goodies to offer the sidewalk shopper.

Take for instance, deep purple string beans! Now, as I've stated, being raised on a farm, these deep purple string beans really received my undivided attention as well as curiosity. Are they common and unique in California only? "Oh, no," replied the grower. "I sent away for the "special" seeds. She went on to inform me although the beans are a deep purple, this is obvious on close observation, when they are cooked they turn green!

Hmmmmmm, sure I thought, but none the less, my curiousness would only be satisfied by purchasing some of those beans.

The seller was right. The beans turn a beautiful bright green, not to mention the water, which gets greener than the grass in the yard! Now, the curiosity is really there — where did the deep purple go??? By the way, the beans were delicious.

Another unique vegetable of the "Bloomer Girls," Betty Rider of Pleasanton, "Boots" McLean and Marie Turpin of Livermore, is a yellow zucchini. This plant remained yellow, no effect to the water either and tasted just as good as a fresh green zucchini.

For one who loves cucumbers, but does not get the same affection returned, the "Bloomer" gals had the answer to that problem with a "burpless" cucumber! Ate the "cukes" all weekend and not one, excuse me, burp yet !! Marinated in wine vinegar, a little salt and pepper, the beans were irrestible to the entire family.

On through the park led me to the Pleasanton vegetable grower, Judi Caplan with a display from her backyard garden. From her, I couldn't pass up the bean sprouts once she informed me they are great with a green salad. Green Salads salads are my survival kits in summer and anything to add a little different flavor is welcomed. And believe a lover of salads, a "delicious" additive they are! If you see green beans sprouting from my ears you'll know how much I'm enjoying my new found additive.

If you are one who loves to can pickles, be it dill, sweet, pickled or whatever, you missed a good buy. Since this homemaker is not one to do any of the above, a hangover from my childhood, a few were purchased just for enjoying in the "raw." Fresh and crisp and so---good.

While standing around and discussing the good buys of the day, — lettuce that melted in your mouth, two small heads for 10 cents, an Argentina squash, an Aregentina squash? yep, it looks and taste entirely different than the regular squash in the markets, a little sweeter flavor — a young couple approached us with, "how do we go about putting some homegrown (Sunol) tomatoes here?" Tomatoes? - red, green, I'll have some. Yes, green tomatoes are scrumptious dipped in batter and fried in butter.

Unfortunately, tomatoes won't be ready for another couple of weeks. A farm gal understands that and will wait patiently for them to fully develope.

As my better half and I were discussing what a difference in taste of vegetables when they are fresh, the kids looked at us as if they didn't know what we were talking about. And the sad part about it, they really didn't. Not having fresh vegetables at a young age to learn what good vegetables really are, they are so use to the water downed, half tastless, days old vegetables and their taste, that something with good flavor is an oddity to them. Just think, some kids will never know what a "fresh" vegetable is.

Out to the backyard with your shovels and spades my young ones. Plant a few seeds, enjoy the feel of the earth to which someday you will return and perhaps sooner than you care if not properly fed. Out with the bottles of vitamins, back to "natural" foods! Everybody is singing that tune, but not too many are doing anything about it though.

So ladies, make sure you attend the next "Vegetable Swap" the Juniors are planning to hold in the near future. Anyone interested in displaying their well cared for and developed "earthly" wares call Pam MacIver at 846-9119 or Karen Barker at 846-4723.

Judi Caplan shows one of her homegrown squashes to young shoppers Nikki and Kelly MacIver of Pleasanton. See Lilly of The Valley column.

Betty Rider gets ready to weigh some of her deep purple string beans which was one of the main attractions at the "Vegetable Swap." See Lilly of The Valley column.

The cast is comprised of students from both Granada and Livermore high schools, who are now rehearsing each morning in preparation for Friday's opening night curtain.

The show is being built from the ground up by the 100-plus cast, giving experience in both technical and dramatic aspects of production.

Performances will be given at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday nights and the same time the following weekend. Tickets are available at $1.50 for adults and $1 for students and children at the door.

SETTING THE SCENE

Bill Hayden

It will not take the limited powers of an amateur psychologist to see, after viewing WHITE LINE FEVER, we have big problems if there are impressionable young who can be influenced by film.

This isn't a condemnation of the picture which happens to be a hyperthyroid, pot-boiling, exploitation flick. WHITE LINE FEVER is designed for two purposes: One; to provide cheap, violent thrills and two; to garner bucks at the box-office. Both of these aims have been nobly achieved.

If one wonders, after wandering in the halls of our schools or standing with the loiterers on the streets where the language of four letter words or the anti-establishment attitudes come from, a trip to see WHITE LINE FEVER may answer the question.

There is the moot point that movies 'reflect' the social scene. This may be true. However, for many years filmmakers have prided themselves with 'setting the pace' in styles, fashions and social mores. Whichever attitude you go along with, there's going to be trouble at the crossroads and it's really too late to head the villain off at the pass because he's already past that point.

There is really nothing new about WHITE LINE FEVER. It's the old good guy battling the baddies and winning out through tenacity, heartbreak and the constitution to survive a wave of violence sufficient unto itself. Greed, corruption, murder, sex and other assorted goodies become just means without an end. Now the kids who used to vie for the honor of being like Roy Rogers or John Wayne in games about cowboys and Indians have the chance to emmulate the latter day 'riders of the purple sage' the truck drivers of America in their battle against corruption and crime. The rustlers and the redskins have been replaced by interstate smugglers who use our modern highway transport for their ill-gotten gains until our noble, but not so pure, hero rides to the rescue on his blue mule. You'll have to see the film to understand that bit of symbolism.

Except for one point in the story when the hero heads for Dallas and never gets there due to some abrupt editing, the story is very straightforward, and told with a minimum of dalliance over the niceties.

WHITE LINE FEVER is not unlike THEY DRIVE BY NIGHT the famed trucking story of another era which featured Humphrey Bogart and George Raft as a couple of knights of the highway faced with similar problems. For some reason, their rough and tough approach to solutions was not needlessly vicious as many of the actions of the current version seem to be. I doubt that these are more violent times. We in these United States have a reputation for overt action going back over the two hundred years we are now in the process of celebrating. You ask, then, what's new?

The 'new' is a sadistic trend the whole concept of pure violence is taking; that blood and brains spread indiscriminately about are an entity unto themselves and do not need justification except as a vicarious thrill factor.

It is all very much like the senseless slaughter of the September massacres of the French revolution. Kill, kill, kill until it had no meaning — until the perpetrators of the violence became its victims. It appears on the surface that for every step forward we have taken in intellectual and scientific advancement there have been two steps backward in our human relationships. This brutalizing of the human spirit is something we should give imperative thought to with the hope we might find a way to reverse the field. If movies are such an important factor in education, then some effort should be made to use them for a creative good. Right now films like WHITE LINE FEVER, while having no social impact or import, can through repetition become a force never meant to be.

WHITE LINE FEVER is pure B-picture entertainment rather well done and it plays for thrills and gets them. If that's all you want, then it's your cup of tea. There is, however, a subliminal disaster factor woven into the fabric. We should be very careful not to take it seriously as a message. It might become a tapestry for our time.

Summer Symphony holds open air concert

Livermore — A concert on the grass, outside the Livermore Public Library (1000 South Livermore Ave.) is in store for music Saturday afternoon.

The program includes Tchaikowsky's "Marche Slave," conducted by Paul Woodward, a student at San Diego State; Vaughan Williams' variation on the old English "Greensleeves," conducted by Daryl Gest of Biola College, Los Angeles; Mozart's "Horn Concerto No. 3," with Suzanne Stear as soloist, conducted by John Green of U.C. Davis; and Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, conducted by Bill Doggett of Davis.

Horse needed

WANTED: A horse with theatrical ambitions. Must be able to pull a small wagon, move on stage, and be accustomed to crowds, loud noises, bright lights, and lots of people singing.

If you answer this description or know a horse that does, Chabot College's production of Meredith Willson's "Music Man," is in need.

The musical, part of the College's Bicentennial Summer Music Festival will be staged August 21 - 23, and again from August 28 - 30 at the Chabot Auditorium in Hayward.

Individuals who feel their horses might fill the bill may contact Dr. Costy at 782 - 3000, ext. 341, or in room 1112 at Chabot College, 25555 Hesperian Blvd., Hayward.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Cool your spending urges till later in the day. You'll be extravagant earlier to satisfy what could be a foolish whim.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Frustration rules your pursuit of desires early in the day. After midday, a sympathetic person soothes your feelings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your thinking cap is on sideways today. Avoid anything involving reasoning or logic. Seek a light-hearted friend to socialize with.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You start the day feeling like everyone is ganging up on you. Evening brings a turnabout and something you'll like.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your pursuit of recognition could be futile till you return from work and find that your family appreciates you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) People bring their problems to you today. Just when you feel like screaming, someone does something nice for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your interest in serious matters wanes easily today, but a romantic interlude could perk you up in the evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Family or associates will bug you to distraction with trivia early today. Hold off on serious work until later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is not the day to work with unfamiliar or dangerous tools. Your mind tends to wander. Relax. Have fun in the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll have pangs of conscience if you spend a lot living it up. Better stick close to home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You disposition at home drives the family up the wall. By evening you'll all feel better if you go out for a spell.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Speaking before you think can get you in a heap of trouble today. Be quiet. Avoid being caught in the middle.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The defense was short, sweet and unsuccessful. East rose with the ace of diamonds and returned the king of spades. It held and he continued with the queen. West thought about overtaking but finally ducked. East led a diamond and South rattled off the rest of the tricks.

"You play like a jackass," shouted East. "Don't you know that I would have raised you in spades if I held king-queen and another."

West was tempted to stand up and poke East in the nose, but refrained for two reasons. First of all, he was a trifle ashamed of his play, but secondly he had a beautiful sarcastic speech ready."

"You know," he told his partner, "there is a traditional way to get a jackass' attention. You hit him over the head with a two by four. You could have obtained this effect by leading the queen and then the king of spades. This unnatural play could mean just one thing. You held just two spades. I would have risen with my ace and given you a ruff to set the contract."

Ask the Jacobys

A Michigan reader wants to know the correct response to partner's one-diamond opening when holding:
♠ A K 6 4 ♥ Q 5 ♦ 4 2 ♣ K Q 9 3 2.

The correct response is two clubs. You are on your way to game or higher and the most important thing for you to do is to give your partner correct information about your distribution. Make sure he will know that you hold more clubs than spades.

Payne eyes position on national soccer team

Dan Payne of Livermore jets out of the Bay Area this evening bound for Southern Methodist University and an opportunity to become a member of the U.S. national under-19 soccer team.

Payne will play striker for the Western Regional all-star team in a tournament at SMU this wedkend. Opponents are Eastern, Southern and Midwestern stars. From the four sides will come 18 players to represent the country next year in the Confederation of North and Central American and Caribbean Soccer Association Championships.

Mercifully. it is known as the CONCACAF Tournament.

Payne, 18, was a member of the squad last year, and is the only Western Region player with experience on the national team.

His experience doesn't insure him a spot of the new side, however. He has to perform well this weekend in the tournament, and then get selected to the U.S. contingent.

The team will travel to Puerto Rico early next year for championships involving 22 national soccer associations.

As a preliminary, the U.S. side will embark on a three week European exhibition next month.

"I'm anxious to make the team," Payne said yesterday; "because I didn't get much chance to play last year, and we're also getting to travel a little more."

Dan was selected from a series of district-wide matches and tryout camps to represent the Western Region this weekend.

He will rejoin four other players from last year's national team, all starters, who are gearing for a second straight year of CONCACAF play. They are Larry Hulcer, Ty Keough and Don Huber of St. Louis, and Tony Bellenger of New Jersey.

Earlier this summer Dan played for the Livermore Neutron team that reached the finals of the Jr National Cup in Milwaukee.

He played previously on four championship teams at Livermore High School.

If he's selected on the U.S. squad, Payne will miss the first part of Chico's summer camp because of the European junket.

"It's kind of bad because all of the other freshmen trying out will be there," Payne said "But it shouldn't be any problem."

George Logan, head coach at San Diego State, is the coach for the U.S. under-19 nationals. Payne played for him a year ago, though he saw no action in actual tournament games.

"I got to play in some of the practice games," Payne said. "But Mr. Logan kind of picks his team and doesn't change from it much. There were five of us last year who didn't get to play much."

Payne's problems were compounded by rules allowing just two substitutions in CONCACAF matches.

This year, a slot in the starting lineup will be just as difficult to earn, Payne says.

"When you get in this kind of competition, the players are much more aggressive, and they use their bodies more. And when you're in the tougher ranks, it's a mental buildup. If you're at this level, you should have the skills down already."

The Americans are not expected to challenge for the CONCACAF championship though they did surprise people with their play last year at the tournament in Canada.

The favorite's role may go to the Mexican team, Payne says. Those players have been exposed to top flight competition in a national camp for the past year, according to Dan. Mexican officials sequestered the country's Olympic, World Game and CONCACAF players in a super-training program.

Prep sports: 'benign neglect' won't do

Inadvertently omitted from yesterday's column on star-promotion in high school sports was a quote from the coach who tried to justify his team's 72-0 roll-up against a clearly beaten and humiliated opponent.

"Our goal was to get a 1,000-yard season for our tailback (who had entered the game needing over 200). He made it. He'll remember that, the team will remember that, longer than they'll remember the pouring on."

Hence the references to "statistics-grabbing" and "a star and a bunch of extras" which appeared later on. It's important to remember that the coach — as well as everyone on the team and a number of hometown apologists — supported the idea of showcasing one individual, even if it meant turning a simple game into an evening of ridicule.

Now, to continue with the argument for maintaining coverage of high school sports:

The Chronicle columnist's concern for star athletes is heartwarming, to be sure. There will be enough ink for them at higher levels, he reasons, so it is best to shield them from too much (or any?) coverage at the age of 16, 17, 18.

That argument misses one essential point: sport in high school is, by definition, part of a community's process of educating its children. Granted, when the children grow big enough and agile enough to perform with a certain amount of skill, their education is translated into entertainment. Alas, that seems to be the cue for other egos to crowd the picture.

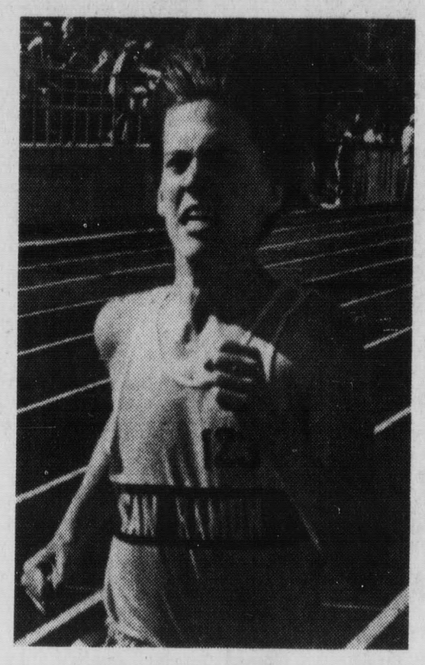
For the two valley papers which cover sports on a day-to-day basis, limited resources are no object when it comes to reporting the sports of the province. And in the competition between the two, athletic coverage often becomes a mock battleground. One sheet will pride itself on accurate listings of junior varsity scoring statistics, while the other gloats over its exclusive story about a father's campaign to reinstate his talented, though reprobate, son to the reigning basketball champions.

The competitive spiral would not be complete without the coaches, many of whom double as public relations liaisons to the neighborhood press. Because they see high school athletics more as a farm system than a healthy end in themselves — most of them having graduated from the elitist structure of conventional college athletics — these coaches tend to expect pre- and post game interviews as part of the divine whole. The familiar phrases "Hey, I feel like as if..." and "...can't take anything away from the Monarchs" and "...won't know until I see the films" have become part of the standard high school coaching argot.

Selected events and practices from the past school year point out a real need for keeping an eye on the fun and games.

The coaching staff at one school, after having viewed a television documentary which showed the high potential for head and neck injuries and death in adolescent football, argued strenuously for a "sophisticated" approach to head blocking and tackling. There was a correct way, they insisted, to stick one's opponent with a helmet, and that was the method they taught. But outside the meeting, their prize varsity tackle explained that he used his helmet as he would a spear, to stay competitive, because "that's the only technique that really works."

At another school, there are no tryouts, per se, for the varsity basketball team. Candidates need not apply. Positions are filled by invitation. Much neater that way.



ROY KISSIN

Elsewhere, a 14-year-old girl with great running and jumping abilities came down on a badly warped takeoff board while practicing the long jump, and suffered a severe ankle sprain. Since it was relatively certain that the board didn't get that way between the time she began her approach and the time she reached takeoff point, it could be said that whoever was running the track program at the school was negligent in his or their basic upkeep of the facility.

But the girl's coach, as if unconscious of this gross oversight (How much does a simple five foot board cost?), spoke of the accident as if it couldn't have been helped. Then he launched into an explanation of how the girl might be able to compete on a partially-healed ankle. "If she can run at all on her heel, he said, "I'll enter her in the North Coast Section meet so that she can perhaps qualify for the state championships." She could, he did, and she competed in obvious misery, finishing poorly.

Balancing the abuses, there have been stories of positive accomplishment and growth between athletes and coaches, which merited coverage because they illustrated good judgement, or at the very least, restraint. Consider Roy Kissin's situation at San Ramon High. Given a more rabid atmosphere, he might have added extra workouts or extra miles here and there in an effort to "point" for the state track meet But thanks to an understanding that his career would probably extend beyond age 30, he and coaches Bob Vincent and Dan Stevens were able to de-mystify the state meet, to take it out of the realm of a papal audience or the Nobel Prize.

"Benign neglect", as advocated by the Chronicle columnist, toward what goes on in high school athletics, would certainly cut down on the problem of ogling and over-stroking star performers. But any community with a public-supported athletic program deserves a good overview of how the various activities, including outstanding accomplishments as well as muck, are being conducted. Besides, almost every reporter covering "the preps" labors under the assumption (illusion?) that if he does his job well enough, maybe some day a metropolitan paper will offer him a column of his own.

Falcons go with youth, Dons win anti-climax

Valley High's expected battle with College Park for the Allied Broker Summer Basketball League title fizzled out Tuesday night when the Falcons failed to appear for the game.

They were committed to a playoff in the Diablo Valley Summer League, conceding to Amador the Allied championship.

In its place, College Park sent a junior varsity team to play the Dons. The Falcons shouldn't have bothered.Amador won, 57-15.

Mike Hill scored 15 points in the rout, and Don Hall, 12.

In other action, Dublin defeated California, 56-45, and San Ramon fell to an Amador alumni team, 83-32.

The Grizzlies fought on even terms with Dublin for most of the first half, trailing by just a field goal two minutes from intermission.

The Gaels pulled away, however, behind Cliff Johnson's 13 points, and 10 from Jerry Puertas. Ed LaPerle chipped in eight.

Cal's Mark Schlieger scored nine points, and Craig Cline and Rick Lackey, eight each.

Mistrial 'relieves' Atkinson

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A mistrial was declared Wednesday in the case of Oakland Raider star George Atkinson when a federal court jury was unable to reach a verdict on embezzlement-larceny charges.

U.S. District Court Judge William Sweigert dismissed the panel after Foreman Richard Corley said the 11 men and one woman were deadlocked.

The foreman told the judge that the jurors were deadlocked 7-5, but it was not known whether the majority favored acquittal or conviction. A juror later told reporters the panel stood 7-5 for conviction.

"I'm relieved," said Atkinson. "It shows some reasonable doubt. I have no need to commit the type of crime that was charged or any other crime."

The defensive halfback allegedly induced two women bank tellers to embezzle $3,200 by stealing and cashing bank drafts, cashiers checks and money orders for him in late 1973 and early 1974.

Angels descend on jr. golfers

When it rains, members of the Northern California Junior Golf Association turn their umbrellas upside-down. They may not believe in pennies from heaven, but some of the group's past funding has been nearly as miraculous.

You pick up a buck wherever you can.

The NCJGA is in its sixth year of kids' summer tournaments, and faced with perplexing growth. From a modest start with 200 youngsters, it has swelled to a membership of 800. If secretary Rosemary Rhodenbaugh had another vacant drawer in her bedroom for filing, the list would surpass 1,000 tomorrow.

The increase is gratifying to founders of the organization. Until it comes time to pay the bills for tournaments, that is.

About the only place directors haven't looked yet for a windfall is to the stars. Heaven knows they've been skulking around down here long enough.

For the past half-decade, the association has ridden the crest of a kindness wave. It trudges along, paying each bill as it arrives in the mail, until suddenly, a Johnny Miller shows up with a fist full of dollars to donate.

Ron Allio, who runs the San Ramon Junior Tournament, was able to purchase more trophies for his event this month when a man walked up on the final day with a $50 check.

Somehow the benefactors keep falling out of the sky, and the association continues to schedule tournaments, sometimes two and three a week

The outbreak of good fortune has reached such a pitch now that directors of the NCJGA can put away their magic lanterns. There is more than $10,000 in the bank, says Allio, a member of the board. Enough that the association may be able to hire a replacement for Mrs. Rhodenbaugh next year when she retires as secretary and chief expediter of golfing information.

The latest news is that William Klinger, a Stockton steel man, has agreed to sponsor annual scholarships for the next five years to one junior boy and girl golfer

The scholarships will be $1,000 grants to each youngster, based on academic standing and financial need. Golfing ability won't enter into the screening of applicants, Allio said. "We like to think all of our youngsters are outstanding golfers anyway."

Closer to home, Allio's San Ramon tournament has been bolstered by a $600 yearly grant from Bay Area businessman Bill Peluso Jr , a Livermore resident who already sponsors his own tournament at Lake Chabot Golf Course in Oakland.

"He's just a civic minded guy who wants to help kids," said Allio.

A lot of those types helped found the NCJGA six years ago in Salinas. Allio, Dr. John Rhodenbaugh of Pleasanton, and Oakland's Walt McConalogue were a few of the guiding forces at the first organizational meetings.

In the early stages, the association provided youngsters with 15 tournaments a year. This summer there are 45. Many of the stops on the summer tour are forced to reject kids because of over crowding. It happened at San Ramon earlier in the month, and at the Livermore City Junior last week.

After six years the NCJGA has been so successful that it must now defend its position before critics.

It's being called a golf factory, and not without some justification. Last year's U.S Junior Amateur champion was Dave Nevatt of Merced. He was forced to defeat Mark Tinder of Pebble Beach in the finals. This year there are 16 NorCal youngsters still in the running for the junior amateur title.

Tinder was recruited by Arnold Palmer for Wake Forrest. The top junior of two seasons back, Mike Brannan, challenged for the NCAA tournament title in his first year of college.

The association is producing champions faster than Wilson and Spalding can make clubs.

"But it's not just for those few," Allio says in defense of his organization. "It's for all of the kids."

There is still one stop left in this vicinity on the 1975 NCJGA tour, the Castlewood Junior Championship Aug. 18-19.

Bench sizes up A's, Reds

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Bench had to stop and ponder awhile when asked what members of the world champion Oakland A's might be good enough to crash the lineup of the red-hot Cincinnati Reds.

"I guess we could use Reggie Jackson," the Reds' all-star catcher replied. "And maybe Joe Rudi—he's such a good allaround player. But I will tell you this. No other team in baseball can put 25 men on the field better than ours.

"This is our year to win the World Series. I am sure we will do it. Everybody else on the team is just as confident."

It has been 35 years since the Reds won the baseball championship although they represented the National League in the series in 1961, 1970 and 1972 and lost in the league playoffs to the New York Mets in 1973.

Balance and confidence are the main ingredients of the current Big Red Machine which so far this year has outplayed every team in both leagues and is threatening—despite a slight post All-Star Game letdown—to make a runaway of the NL's West Division.

"When Don Gullett got hurt, we didn't know what might happen to us," Bench said. "We were afraid we might suffer from loss of a top starting pitcher.

Italian submarine

New Marine

Marine Private Allen E. Kot, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Kot of 5722 Mines Road in Livermore, was graduated from recruit training at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot in San Diego.

Diesel exhaust saver

The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) has announced that early tests of a new system to capture and use the exhaust heat of diesel engines potentially could improve the fuel economy of long haul diesel trucks by as much as 15 per cent.

The system was developed by Thermo Electron, Inc. of Massachusetts and the Mack Truck Company of Pennsylvania.

A prototype will be ready for road testing in 1976 and the system could be commercially available in the early 1980's.

The system, called an organic Rankine bottoming cycle, uses the exhaust heat to vaporize a working fluid which, in turn, drives a small turbine wheel. The result is like getting "free" power to climb, accelerate or run accesories such as refrigeration units, heaters and headlights.

ERDA, Thermo Electron and Mack engineers feel confident that a system designed specifically for large trucks could save 15 per cent in fuel.

Utah to study coal liquefaction

The Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) announced a $2.6 million grant to the University of Utah for research into the conversion of western coals to clean liquid and gaseous fuels.

The Lawrence Livermore Laboratory has also been doing research into in situ coal gasification in the Rocky Mountains.

The University of Utah will delve into production of liquids from heavy oils by fluid-bed hydrocracking as well as the mechanisms of catalytic liqeufaction of coal and the separation of the components of coal-derived liquids.
